History

Merrill, Wisconsin

Like a number of settlements in the great timber country of the North, Merrill was some time arriving at its name. In the early 1840s as the timber country was open to meet the needs of the tree-barren prairie states and a growing nation, the present site of Merrill was known as Jenny Bull Falls. It lay at the heart of a vast forest land known best to the Chippewa Indians who camped at Big Eddy and pow-wowed at Council Grounds.

By 1843, a trading post was built about a mile and a half south. John Faely had constructed the first home shortly before. Four years later, Andrew Warren began construction of a dam across the Wisconsin River at the foot of Mill Street. Warren also built the first of what was to be a number of sawmills in Jenny Bull Falls and later Merrill. The mill was powered by the dam which was nine feet high and nearly 500 feet wide. In 1870, T. B. Scott succeeded Warren in ownership of the mill. By 1880, the mill had an annual capacity of 10 million board feet plus two million shingles. Fifteen years later the mill was producing 25 million feet of lumber and 20 million shingles. In 1899, this highly productive mill burned to the ground. In the meantime, Jenny Bull Falls legally changed to Merrill in honor of the general manager of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad, Mr. S. S. Merrill. This railroad and passenger depot, a hub of social activity through the boom lumbering years and after, served as a community youth center until its demise in 1976.

A number of significant events took place during the 1880s and 1890s. Coinciding with the adoption of the name Merrill in 1881, the Wisconsin Telephone Company began operation with 20 phones in service. By 1885, the population had reached 7,000, only 3,000 less than live in Merrill today. Two years before, in 1883, Merrill incorporated and the first

City Council met and T. B. Scott was named the lumber city's first mayor.

Electric street cars were placed in operation in 1890, one of the first such installations in the world. Further evidence of the refinement of civilization was seen a year later when the T. B. Scott Library was opened. Eighteen Ninety-One was the arrival in Merrill of the famed Hans V. Kaltenborn. Only a lad of 13, Kaltenborn grew to maturity here with his family and then went on to become the dean of American news commentators. Eighteen ninety-two marked the peak of the lumbering boom. That year, with eight mills in operation, a staggering 150,000,000 board feet of lumber was produced along with 86 million shingles. From this point, the impact of lumbering began to taper off primarily due to the decline in the great pine forests. The lumbering men began to concentrate on the hardwood forests; in 1898 nearly 20 mills in this area produced hardwood lumber. Merrill's present recognition as a principal millwork center seems only natural in light of the lumbering background of the community.

The turn of the century marked a milestone for Merrill. Faced with a diminishing timber supply, the people who had built the city faced a decision-move on to greater timber resources, or stay and diversify their industry. Their decision to stay underscores one of the great strengths of Merrill today—a diversity of industry that provided a stable economic base and avoids those problems inherent in a city of one or few industries.
